Refugee report: Marc Ziemek, who heads the Konrad Adenauer Foundation's Seoul office, speaks during a ceremony to mark the publication of a book, titled "North Korean Refugee Report," at the Lotte Hotel in Seoul, Thursday. Ziemek, editor of the book, expressed hope that the publication will help increase awareness of the current situation of North Korean refugees in South Korea, and that their successful integration will serve as an important step toward peaceful unification of the Korean Peninsula. Korean and English editions are available. The foundation is an independent German political organization.
