

INVITES YOU TO

Book launch of “Rethinking Reconciliation: Evidence from South Africa”

25 May 2017
17.00 for 17.30 until 19.00

V10 - Option #1b

This edited volume uses a decade of public opinion survey data to answer key questions about the extent of progress in South African reconciliation.

Leading social scientists analyse longitudinal data derived from the South African Reconciliation Barometer Survey (SARB) (conducted annually by the Institute for Justice and Reconciliation since 2003), as well as interrogate and reach critical conclusions on the state of reconciliation - including in the areas of economic transformation, race relations and social contact, political participation, national identity formation and transitional justice.

Their findings both confirm and disrupt theory on reconciliation and social change, and point to critical new directions in thinking and policy implementation.

PANEL:

Dr Kim Wale: Historical Trauma and Transformation Studies Unit, Stellenbosch University
Prof Rajen Govender: Department of Sociology, University of Cape Town
Prof Harry Garuba: African Studies Unit, University of Cape Town.

Moderator: Judith February, Institute for Security Studies

VENUE:

Institute for Justice and Reconciliation Offices
105 Hatfield, Gardens, Cape Town

*RSVP to PVutula@ijr.org.za
by 22 May 2017