

The Budapest Security Conference: What do we expect in Warsaw?

Tasks and Challenges of the NATO

Program of the event

Date: Budapest, 25th February 2016

Venue: Gerbeaud Budapest, Vörösmarty tér 7-8, 1051

Registration: by email at info@ceid.hu or at Ms. Noémi Matis (noemi.matis@ceid.hu)

The last NATO Summit proved that the security architecture of Europe has seldom faced so many challenges as in the last two years. Although cooperation in Europe, including the V4 has developed substantially in the field of security and defense, the environment is changing so rapidly that further fields of cooperation should be established, while others have to be revised. The conference, organised one year after the Wales Summit and half a year before the summit in Poland, would like to support and keep the discussion on a more intensified level. In the Budapest Security Conference, we intend to focus on topics in which the region has special interest or a larger influence, and promote further discussions where there is no united position yet, or cooperation is still insufficient.

8.30 Registration

9.00 Opening Speech

Dániel Bartha, Director, Centre for Euro-Atlantic Integration and Democracy

9.15 Welcome Speech

Frank Spengler, Resident Representative of the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung in Hungary

9.30-10.45 PANEL I: European Security Outlook before the NATO Summit

Half a year before the Warsaw Summit the situation needs to be re-evaluated. Europe's security status changed dramatically in 2015, the Alliance has to face several crises and challenges. New perspectives should be delivered for the Summit in Poland.

Mr. Iurie Leanca, former Prime Minister of the Republic of Moldova

11.15 PANEL II: Migration as a Long-term Challenge

Central and South-Eastern Europe experienced an unprecedented influx of refugees/migrants in 2015. The massive inflow continues in 2016, posing a political, a humanitarian and also a security challenge for Europe. The effective protection of outside borders, the control and the proper registration of immigrants are tasks all European states need to fulfill, but approaches are still different. Can we make a convergence and find a common European security strategy?

Moderated by: Edit Inotai, Senior Fellow, Centre for Euro-Atlantic Integration and Democracy

Speakers: Michael Spindelegger, Director General, International Centre for Migration Policy

14.00 PANEL III: NATO-Russia Relationship: the End of a "Beautiful Friendship"

The crisis in Ukraine created a dead-lock in NATO-Russian relations. We have to deal with the shadow of the conflict for years, but there is a clear need for some kind of cooperation. Among other fields, discussion is necessary in questions like nuclear disarmement, Islamic radicalism or the future of Syria.

15.15 Coffee Break

15.30 Keynote Speech (Hungarian Ministry of Defence- to be confirmed)

15.45 PANEL IV: Collective Defence

Through the ongoing changes in security and military strategies, we already experience that the crises had a long-term impact on the security perceptions in our region. These changes can modify the development of the armed forces, the active involvement of these countries in international missions and they can further enlarge the gap within the NATO. Therefore it is most likely that new fields of in-depth cooperation have to be introduced, while previous programs have to be reviewed.
