Summer School 2015

“Who are we in Europe?”

Challenges and Perspectives of the European Community of Values

21 September – 27 September, 2015 – Vravrona, Greece

The Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung welcomes applications to its first international Summer School on European identity in Vravrona, Greece.

The objective of the course is to provide a comprehensive overview of the main contemporary challenges in Europe, with a particular focus on its Southeastern region. Issues such as the future of the European Economic and Monetary Union, European Asylum System and fight against youth unemployment will be debated against the background of our European identity: Do these policy-areas mirror the EU’s formal commitment to a set of common values such as democracy, peace, individual freedom and human rights or are they driven by mere economic and political interests of its member-states? Are there values shared by all EU-citizens? What do Europeans have in common? What is the future of the European integration project?

For those interested in European politics, the Summer School offers a unique opportunity to discuss these essential questions with experts and political actors in an open and international setting.

Participants that fulfill the following criteria can apply for the KAS Summer School 2015:

- Undergraduate, graduate and PhD students as well as young professionals up to 30 years old
- Very good command of English
- Knowledge of the European Integration process

During the event the participants will be guests of the Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung. No participation fee will be charged.

The Konrad-Adenauer-Stiftung (KAS) is a German political foundation. With more than 80 country offices and 200 local and regional projects abroad we support the establishment of structures that enable democracy and civil society. For more information: <http://www.kas.de/wf/en/>
