Session 1

Engaging an Equal, Resilient, and Productive Global Economic Recovery through the G20

Panel Session 14.30 – 16.30

To promote an equal, resilient, and productive global economic recovery, the G20 under Indonesia's presidency needs to strive for the formulation of solutions for key economic recovery issues. One of the foremost important issues to work on is the establishment of a reliable and inclusive global trade and supply chains, the benefit of which would penetrate all elements of society. Ensuring the flow of trade and encourage restraint over protectionist trade measures would continue to be a key theme for next year. In addition, the G20 will also need to balance and support such effort with the attainment of an even global vaccine distribution. Lastly, as one of Indonesia's agenda is to enhance a short-term and long-term financial stability, it is important to review how far the financial support and debt restructuring initiative from the G20 has helped the developing and low-income countries to mitigate and recover from the pandemic. As the second highest donator for COVAX, Germany shares the value of solidarity with Indonesia. Both countries can cooperate in sharing the knowledge for the promotion of an even global economic recovery through trade, health, and developmental aspects.

This panel will discuss the issue of uneven recovery, as well as review the current situation with the global supply chain and the progress of G20 initiatives to recover from the pandemic. Panelists are expected to share their views, based on their own expertise, of: 1) the current condition of the global and regional trade and supply chains, what has improved so far, what could be improved to reach a resilient global trade and supply chain, and how the national policy outlook on this issue; 2) the latest update on vaccine distribution and development in the country, how the success of vaccination can help their national economic recovery, how the vaccine solidarity can speed up the global economic recovery, and how the vaccine solidarity can tight the global recovery gap; 3) policy outlook on implementation plan of innovative financing for sustainable development; 4) the prospect of Germany and Indonesia cooperation towards the G20 agenda especially on these issues.

Session 2

Seizing Momentum for Sustainability through the G20

Panel Session

14.00-16.00

The issue of climate change is rapidly becoming one of the greatest and most urgent challenge for humankind. This year alone, we are seeing plenty of disastrous events from extreme weather, from wildfires to heat waves and floods. The urgency to mitigate the adverse impact of climate change has more than ever been integrated to the attention and agenda of the world's most important forums, not least through deepen and expand the agenda for sustainable development. The G20 has agreed to commit to contribute and support the implementation of the global consensus and adoption of the 2030 Agenda for Sustainable Development, which includes the agenda to protect the planet from degradation. In recent years, the forum has stepped up efforts to promote and align the climate ambition of G20 countries to that of the Paris Agreement, especially through the G20 Study Group on Green/Sustainable Finance. After all, the G20 is responsible for more than two thirds of global GHG emissions. As a group that represents at least 85% of global GDP, without the influence, ambition, and a display of leadership from these countries, achieving Paris Agreement goals will be unlikely. To advance green finance and investment and drive the mobilization of funding for green economy and the overall pathway towards lowering greenhouse gas emissions should be a permanent agenda for the G20, if not a priority.

This panel will discuss the efforts to promote the agenda of sustainability inside the G20, as well as its problems and prospect. Panelists are asked to share their knowledge and views, based on their own expertise, on: 1) updates on the many initiatives on climate change mitigation and financing inside particularly the G20; 2) recent lessons in the implementation of green policies from Indonesia and Europe; 3) The prospect and challenges in the promotion and pursuant of the agenda of sustainability in the G20, including recommendations for Indonesia's presidency.

Day 3

Thursday, 4 November 2021, 14.00-16.00 (Jakarta Time/GMT+7)

Session 3

Prospect for Preparation and Promotion of Digital Transformation under the G20

Panel Session

14.00-16.00

Since the arrival of the COVID-19 pandemic, digital transformation on all forms of economic interaction has taken new heights. As countries strive for economic recovery and prepare for a future of sustainable economic growth, the issue of digitalization is more important than ever. For the G20, the commitment to prepare for global digital transformation of economies and societies have been getting stronger. The 2021's Italian presidency of the G20, for instance, placed digitalization, particularly of digital governance, at its heart. The G20 Task Force for Digital Economy was subsequently transformed into the more permanent Digital Economy Working Group. With the idea of a human-centered digitalization thriving in the G20, the forum holds an important place in encouraging a more inclusive and accessible digital transformation approach around the world, which would be crucial as the world recovers from the pandemic. The idea of a productive and inclusive digital transformation has also been adopted well in Indonesia's plan for its G20 presidency.

This panel will discuss ideas for digital inclusions and digital governance, particularly through means available inside the G20. Panelists are asked to present their knowledge, based on their own expertise, on: 1) global governance on digital transformation; 2) the latest of innovative policies (national, regional, and/or global) to improve digital inclusions, including in improving human resource skills and capacities, policies on digital taxation, and others, in anticipation of the ongoing global digital transformation; review and recommendation to promote the agenda of a resilient, inclusive, and sustainable digitalization inside the G20.
